QUEENSLAND DERBY VICTORY A MASSIVE BOOST FOR WAR DECREE

Inglewood Stud's Gus Wigley at Karaka earlier this year (Trish Dunell)

The stunning Gr.1 Queensland Derby (2400m) victory by Warmonger (NZ) (War Decree) on Saturday has already begun to pay dividends for the Wigley family who stand his sire War Decree at their South Island-based boutique breeding operation Inglewood Stud.

A son of internationally acclaimed sire War Front, War Decree will stand his seventh season at Inglewood later this year with the three-year-old Warmonger becoming his first Group One winner from just his second crop.

Stud principal Gus Wigley had just returned from a week at the Magic Millions Weanling and Broodmare Sale on the Gold Coast with wife Bianca, where they purchased four young mares to bolster their breeding stock and were thrilled with the victory of Warmonger who was bred by long-time family friend Kevin Hickman.

"We were over there for the week as we had recently sold Parmalove, the dam of this season's outstanding two-year-old filly Velocious and we went there specifically to buy three or four young mares to help boost our band here at home," Wigley said.

"It was a really big decision to sell Parmalove as she is a mare I just adore, but we are in the breeding game for the long haul and you have to make those sorts of decisions to keep making progress.

"We ended up getting a lovely Snitzel mare before the sale and then three from the sale itself which we are thrilled about as they were the exact three we had gone there to buy and it doesn't always pan out that way.

"The mares will stay in Australia initially and then come home to New Zealand for the breeding season next year where they will be mated with New Zealand-based stallions which is the long-term plan for them."

Wigley admitted his phone hasn't stopped ringing since the Warmonger victory with a number of additional bookings already adding to an excellent book for War Decree in 2024.

"I think I've taken between twelve and fifteen bookings already for War Decree and I think there is more to come," he said.

"He was already very popular with the way his first crops have performed through the deeds of Val Di Zoldo, Third Decree and Luvnwar, who was sold to Australian interests before the 1000 Guineas (Gr.1, 1600m) last year, to name just a few.

"The great thing is that there are so many South Island breeders who have mares here they would normally send up to a North Island stallion whereas now they have another genuine quality stallion to consider much closer to home."

Whilst the 10.4 length Derby romp meant there was much cause for celebration, Wigley said there was a tinge of sadness as his thoughts immediately turned to the gelding's breeder Kevin Hickman. The principal of the former Valachi Downs continues a battle with ill-health that led to the dispersal of much of his admired breeding stock.

"We have had a long and wonderful friendship with Kevin and his family and we were proud to stand Zacinto from 2012 until his move north to Valachi Downs in 2018," Wigley said.

"We recruited War Decree as the replacement for Zacinto and Kevin, through his Valachi Downs broodmare band, supported us by sending mares to him.

"Princess Sapphire, the dam of Warmonger, is one of those and there was quite a bit of emotion after the race on Saturday as it would have been an even better moment if we could have celebrated with Kevin.

"His impact on New Zealand thoroughbred breeding shouldn't be overlooked as those mares he imported will have a long-lasting impact on our game and I'm sure the people who were involved with Valachi for all those years will have got just as big a kick out of this victory as we did." – NZ Racing Desk

KA YING RISING A NEW STAR IN HONG KONG

Hong Kong has discovered a new sprinting star with Ka Ying Rising's (NZ) (Shamexpress) lightweight victory in the HK$4.2 million Gr.3 Sha Tin Vase Handicap (1200m) at Sha Tin on Sunday.

The David Hayes-trained gelding faced his biggest test and most daunting opposition after winning his past three starts, all at Sha Tin, but again showed his class in the eight-horse field.

Now with an overall record of five wins at Sha Tin, the three-year-old successfully faced off with more seasoned rivals led by Group One winners Victor The Winner (Toronado) and Invincible Sage (Thronum).

Ka Ying Rising's demolition job of a quality field in Class 2 at his most recent start when he won by two and a half lengths gave his supporters plenty of faith that he could roll the highly fancied Invincible Sage, who won the HK$22 million Gr.1 Chairman's Sprint Prize (1200m) on FWD Champions Day (28 April).

Ka Ying Rising was the only three-year-old in the race and also the most inexperienced with just six starts. He also had the benefit of the minimum weight.

As expected, Victor The Winner crossed to lead from the outside barrier while Ka Ying Rising, expertly ridden by Karis Teetan, jumped about midfield but quickly drove through to settle fourth.

Ka Ying Rising made his run wide and with 20 pounds fewer than Victor The Winner quickly grabbed his more seasoned rival, with Flying Ace (NZ) (Swiss Ace) and Howdeepisyourlove (Deep Field) finishing quickly but never a chance of overhauling the winner.

After finally snaring a good inside barrier, Flying Ace fought on gamely from gate three to grab second but was no match for Ka Ying Rising.

"It's a bit opportunity and I've got to thank David (Hayes) and the owners as I knew the horse was going to come with a light weight," Teetan said.

"All credit to the horse. He is a progressive young fellow and I think he has got a bright future in Hong Kong."

Teetan said Ka Ying Rising gives the feel of a good horse.

"I said to David I was pretty happy to get some sort of cover on him and I could just feel he was ready for me to push the button on him."

Hayes could now look ahead for better races for his new stable star who he predicts will only get better and he was full of credit for Teetan's ride.

"What I loved is Karis could just put him in the one-one and give him a beautiful trip," Hayes said.

"Karis said he was sort of switching off late, day dreaming and being a bit young, but when it's time to push the button, he's got incredible acceleration and he ran 1m 08.00s Not many horses do that in Hong Kong."

Hayes said the horse had sent him a message tonight when he up on his toes more which showed him the horse has probably had enough now.

"It's a good time to stop him and bring him back for, maybe, the first race of the season (Class 1 HKSAR Chief Executive's Cup Handicap, 1200m)," he said.

"He's really something to get out of bed for and look forward to training next year."

HULA BEAT TAKES OUT TE AROHA CUP

In a desperate finish to the Te Aroha Veterinary Services Te Aroha Cup (2200m) on Monday, race favourite Hula Beat (NZ) (Redwood) provided rider Sam Weatherley with a fitting birthday gift when he thrust his nose in front at just the right time to claim victory.

Weatherley would have been counting the money shortly after turning for home as his mount was travelling like a winner as he looped the field and shot to the front.

Shortly afterwards the first signs of panic appeared as firstly Georgian Warrior issued a strong challenge before the pair of Rua Rocks (NZ) (El Roca) and Ata Rangi (NZ) (Haradasun) entered the fray along the inner.

As the quartet hit the line it was the Stephen Marsh-prepared Hula Beat who thrust his nose in front to take the decision over Rua Rocks with Ata Rangi just a nose away in third as Georgian Warrior (NZ) (Derryn) finished close up in fourth.

Marsh was also confident when he saw his charge take control early in the run home and was prepared to excuse him a few wayward tendencies over the closing stages to the contest.

"I thought he was going to win by five lengths, but he got a bit distracted and I have said he is not as effective going right handed," Marsh said.

"Sam said he was gawking around at the steeplechase fences and the crowd but when he put his mind back on the job he really knuckled down and got the win.

"It was probably a better effort than it may have looked and he is a nice progressive horse that is suited by the winter surfaces."

Marsh will now take a look at some of the options available to the horse over the next few months although he will look to avoid meetings where the tracks offer firmer footing.

"We will try and keep him going left-handed so that probably precludes looking at those Ruakaka winter meetings as he is also likely to strike a better surface than he needs up there," he said.

"In saying that he races well at Te Rapa and there is some nice money on offer there and at a few meetings on left-handed tracks coming up so that is likely where we will aim him."

Bred by Westbury Stud owner Gerry Harvey and raced under his New Zealand Thoroughbred Holdings Ltd banner, Hula Beat is a son of Westbury's resident stallion Redwood and is the last foal of unraced Zabeel mare Limbea.

His granddam Dancing Hula is a half-sister to multiple Group One winner Love Dance while he is also closely related to Gr.1 Railway Handicap (1200m) placegetter Tip The Wink.

The victory took his career record to four wins from 20 starts while he added another success to an outstanding season for Marsh who currently sits on 87 wins with more than $5million in prizemoney earnt for his Cambridge stable. - LOVERACING.NZ News Desk

PIER BACK WITH A VENGEANCE

Former quality three-year-old Pier (NZ) (Proisir) made a welcome return to racing at Te Aroha on Monday when he strode to an impressive first-up victory in an open 1300m contest.

The strapping son of outstanding Rich Hill Stud stallion Proisir hadn't been seen since finishing sixth in the Gr.1 Arrowfield Stakes (1600m) at Hastings last September, and has subsequently been rehabilitating a cannon bone issue.

Prepared by the father-and-daughter training partnership of Darryn and Briar Weatherley, the now four-year-old warmed up for his assignment with a comfortable victory over 1000m at the Te Aroha trials last month.

Rider Sam Weatherley allowed the gelding to find his feet at the rear of the field and was still back a clear last with 600m to travel.

Pier looped the field rounding the home bend and once he found clear air out widest on the track, he unleashed a powerful sprint that carried him to a convincing one length victory over Dusty Road (NZ) (Shamexpress) who fought on bravely after making the pace throughout and Fonteyn (NZ) (Swiss Ace) who stuck well for third.

Weatherley was delighted with the result, although his first reaction was one of relief.

"A big sigh of relief and very happy to see him do that," he said.

"The big question mark for me was the track, which was more testing than we would have liked, but like a good horse he copped everything that was thrown at him and still got the job done.

"I also thought he may be one run

Pier (outside) winning at Te Aroha on Monday. (Trish Dunell)

short, but those really top athletes just have that ability to give their best even when not everything is in their favour and he showed that today."

Weatherley has always held the highest opinion of his charge and that hasn't changed over the past year.

"It has been a real exercise in patience as he had that niggly problem and we had to give him a good break," he said.

"We did everything we were told and his x-rays since then have been very good.

"He handled his trial well, so we pressed on and now he has had this race I'm going to tip him out again and get ready for the spring.

"This will have topped up his confidence as it has certainly done it for me, so now I can't wait to get him back in and have him show people just how good he is."

Bred by Weatherley and his wife Lou, along with long-time friend Barry Wright, and raced in partnership by the trio and leviathan Australian-based owner Ozzie Kheir, Pier has now won four of his 10 starts and more than $473,000 in prizemoney.

SUCCESSFUL JUMPING DEBUT FOR HELENA BABY

Helena Baby on his way to winning at Te Aroha on Monday. (Trish Dunell)

Quality flat performer Helena Baby (NZ) (Guillotine) added a second string to an already impressive bow as he cruised to a debut victory over fences when taking out the TAJC Hospitality Hurdle (3100m) at Te Aroha on Monday with consummate ease.

With racing returning to Te Aroha for the first time since January, the nine-year-old son of Guillotine put on a display befitting of the occasion as he led from barrier rise in the hands of Nick Downs.

The John Bell-trained runner hardly put a foot wrong and although chancing the third last fence, punters who installed him as the $1.60 favourite never had a moment of doubt as he strolled to the line seven lengths to the good of Call Me Jack who had chased him forlornly for the final 600m.

Bell noted he had been preparing his charge for a future jumping career for the past three years and was confident he would perform to a high level despite not having been sighted in the role on raceday.

"He got a little bit tired and put in a couple of short ones (leaps) at the end but he was good enough to get away with it," Bell said.

"We have spent a lot of time getting him ready for this day and my only real concern was the 3100m as he has never been over that sort of distance before.

"I've always been told that a really good sprinter will make a good hurdler as long they can settle so Nick had to keep him under wraps to make sure he got around, and he did a great job.

"Time and patience always works and we have certainly done that with this guy, so now he has had his first taste of it I will need to talk to my jumping buddies as well as having a good chat with Nick about where they think we should be aiming him."

Bred by Windsor Park Stud, Helena Baby made a barnstorming start to his racing career in New Zealand when he put together a five-race winning sequence during the winter of 2019, including victory in the Listed Opunake Cup (1400m) of that season.

After finishing third to champion mare Melody Belle (NZ) (Commands) in the Gr.1 Tazino Trophy (1400m) to close out that campaign the John Bell-trained gelding transferred to Hong Kong where he had a further 14 starts which resulted in a pair of minor placings, before returning to New Zealand where he has won two further races (including a second Opunake Cup) before Monday's hurdle victory.

His 45 career starts have now netted over $300,000 in prizemoney.

BRADLEY OFFICIALLY HANGING UP HIS BOOTS

Central Districts jockey Darryl Bradley has been in a career transition over the last few years, and he feels now is the right time to officially call time on his riding career.

It brings the curtain down on four decades in the saddle where the 57-year-old horseman has recorded 1,832 wins, and 103 of those at stakes level.

For the last five years, Bradley has been transitioning to a career as a racecourse manager, for which he is now the track manager of Manawatu Harness Racing Club in Palmerston North, following stints at Awapuni and Foxton racecourses.

"I knew my riding career was starting to dry up, so I was searching for another job, and I was lucky enough to get the course manager's job at Foxton Racing Club five-and-a-half years ago. That was a great start," Bradley said.

"The club allowed me to continue doing track work and riding raceday.

"I really started to enjoy course management and I was told Foxton would never be a raceday venue again and I wanted to grow and be a racecourse manager. Manawatu Harness (track manager job) came up a little while later and I got the job, and I am very grateful."

While Bradley made a career in the saddle, harness racing isn't foreign to him, having grown up with a dual-code trainer father, Graham Bradley.

"I was brought up in harness when I was an apprentice, because my father trained both codes," Bradley said.

"My career is all due to my father, who was a sheep and beef farmer. His father was into harness and he used to drive in races himself.

"We moved to Stratford and Dad started to get a little (racing) team around him of both codes – thoroughbreds and standardbreds."

Surrounded by both thoroughbreds and standardbreds growing up, it was the former that captured a young Bradley's imagination, and he was intent on pursuing a career as a jockey.

"When I was a kid, even though I had very little to do with racing, I loved the horses, the speed and the colours, and I always said 'I want to be a jockey when I grow up,'" he said.

However, he still held a passion for harness racing, so attempted to go down both paths in his youth.

"I did my cadetship as a harness driver and did the probationary part of that – I drove in trials. I went to apply for my raceday license and NZTR (New Zealand Thoroughbred Racing) wouldn't allow me to be a dual code license holder, so naturally I kept my thoroughbred license, I was three years into my apprenticeship by then."

Bradley said his father was instrumental in launching his riding career.

"If I hadn't been with my Dad, I would have been one of those typical apprentices that was mucking out and doing the dirty work all the time and got the occasional slow ride just to keep me happy," he said. "But with Dad, he put me on everything, and we were self-taught, and I gradually learned the trade."

Bradley rode his first winner for his father in 1984, while his first stakes win came several seasons later.

"Choir Path was my first winning ride, he was Dad's horse," he said. "My first stakes winner might have been Sir Daniel in the Hawke's Bay Cup in 1992."

Bradley enjoyed his time working under his father, but decided a move to Palmerston North was important to help further his riding career.

"One day I said to Dad, 'if I want to grow then I have got to go to Manawatu, that is where the heart of Central Districts racing is', and I moved to Manawatu in 1994," he said.

"I had to gradually get more confidence and more trainers' support. I rode for Felix Campbell and that is when it started to turn, when you are riding Group winners."

Bradley's career trajectory continued to rise, and eventually he became the country's leading jockey in the 1998/99 season when riding 133 winners, eight at stakes level, and more than $1.3 million in prizemoney.

"A season before that I really started to hit my straps," Bradley said. "A very good trainer friend of mine in Invercargill started to push me and said 'let's target the premierships next year.'"

Bradley said he has had a number of highlights in his career, but none more so than winning the 2016 Gr.1 Auckland Cup (3200m) with El Soldado.

"That was a race I thought I would never win," he said. "I find Ellerslie the hardest track to ride. It was something special about El Soldado winning."

"He was only just ahead of Sapio winning the Doomben Cup and New Zealand Cup."

Bradley also enjoyed a lot of success on a number of other horses and enjoyed a solid record with a number of Central Districts trainers.

"There was Chad, he won 14 races and I won 13 on him, and I won 12 on King Of Ashford," he said. "I had a good association with Karren Zimmerman when she was at Otaki, I rode just over 100 winners for her. Then joining the stable of Lisa Latta, the list goes on there.

"In the mid-nineties, I got a call from Kay Marsh, Bruce Marsh's wife and she asked if I wanted to join their stable. That was a big boost to my career, Bruce was a very astute trainer."

Bradley's riding career also afforded him the ability to travel internationally.

"I have ridden in four states of Australia, with a couple of placings and the Group One win in the Doomben Cup," he said. "When I won the (New Zealand Jockeys') premierships, I was lucky enough to represent New Zealand in the World Jockeys' Championship in Japan. After the first day, I was first equal, and I ended up seventh overall."

"I rode Sapio in Hong Kong for an international race, I had four months in Malaysia where I rode 17 winners, and I spent two months in Mauritius before I got sick and had to come home. I had three wins there from 20 rides."

"If it wasn't for horse racing, I wouldn't have probably gone out of the country. The people you meet and places you go are just beautiful."

While Bradley will miss riding on raceday, he said it is the people that have made his career so special.

"There are a lot of fantastic people in the industry," he said.

THREE OUT OF THREE FOR POKURU GOLD

Promising three-year-old Pokuru Gold (NZ) (Darci Brahma) headed to Pukekohe on Saturday and extended his perfect record to three out of three, but this time he really had to work for it.

The Darci Brahma gelding was sent out as a $1.40 favourite for the Auckland Co-Op Taxis (1200m) after scoring dominant victories in both of his two previous appearances. He romped home by three and a half lengths on debut on the Cambridge synthetic track back in September, then resumed at Te Rapa on May 18 and picked up right where he left off with another clear-cut win by two and a half lengths.

Pokuru Gold jumped smartly from the Pukekohe starting gates on Saturday, then was crossed by both Naxos (NZ) (Harry Angel) and Murch (NZ) (Telperion). He travelled well just behind the leaders in the hands of Opie Bosson, but then got squeezed backwards when the field tightened up at the home turn.

Bosson got him into the clear and began to move him through his gears, and Pokuru Gold soon worked his way past the front-running Murch. But his job was far from over, with lightly raced filly Rareza (NZ) (Exosphere) finishing strongly from off the pace.

Pokuru Gold lifted again when Rareza drew up alongside him, and he fought that rival off and won by a long neck.

"That was a good effort," Bosson said. "He got shunted back straightening up, but he was good enough to pick himself up well and fight hard to the line."

"He's quite unassuming, very laid-back and only does what he has to, but he can definitely gallop."

Pokuru Gold is trained by Mark Walker and Sam Bergerson for owner-breeder Ian Farrelly. His three-from-three career has so far banked $53,485 in stakes.

"It was a really good win today," assistant trainer Nicole Shailer said. "He's a promising three-year-old. That's his third win now and he seems to love the wet. If he comes through this well, we'll look at a 1000m race at Trentham in a couple of weeks (June 15)."

Pokuru Gold is the first named foal out of the winning Stravinsky mare Pokuru Nugget, whose dam Pokuru Star is a sister to the dams of Group One stars Embellish, Diademe and Sacred Star.

ELIUD SHINES IN CLASS

RISE AT WANGANUI

Progressive three-year-old Eliud (NZ) (Almanzor) took a rise in class with ease at Wanganui on Saturday when racing away with the Property Brokers 3YO 1600.

The Almanzor gelding has been held in high regard by Cambridge trainer Tony Pike for some time, and he delivered on that promise at his fourth start at Taranaki in May with a comprehensive maiden success.

Pike set a stronger task for Eliud in the open three-year-old contest on Wanganui's feature day, where he sat a $2.20 favourite in a competitive field that included Bozo (NZ) (Satono Aladdin), who finished fourth in the Gr.1 New Zealand Oaks (2400m) at $5.20, and Listed winner Loch Katrine (NZ) (Ardrossan) ($5.40).

In the hands of Michael McNab, Eliud jumped positively from gate four and assumed the role as a rolling pacemaker heading along the back straight, staying well away from the fence.

His main rivals in Bozo and Loch Katrine remained within chasing distance of the favourite turning for home and the former looked like she may be looming up to Eliud, but once

McNab pushed the button at the 200 metres, he stormed clear to win by an extending 3 ½ length margin.

McNab shared Pike's opinion of the gelding in his early preparations, and was thrilled to see that on display despite the Heavy 10 track conditions.

"He's always shown good ability at home, he was a bit disappointing in his first couple of starts but he's come back this prep really well," McNab said.

"I cantered a long way down the back in my prelim to have a good look at it, and where I was is the best spot.

"My main aim was just to keep him comfortable and not break stride or dip in the ground. That was the key for him and he picked up really well so it was good."

With all still to play for in the final two months of the New Zealand Jockey's Premiership, McNab tightened the gap on Warren Kennedy with winning trebles at both the Cambridge and Riccarton Synthetic meetings bringing his tally to 114, two shy of Kennedy.

Eliud is out of a lightly-ried Rip Van Winkle mare in Pendleton, who among her four career victories in just nine starts picked up the Listed Dunedin Gold Cup (2400m).

He was offered by breeder Kevin Hickman's Valachi Downs at the 2022 Karaka Yearling Sales and was purchased for $320,000 by Waikato Bloodstock, with $35,380 returned on that investment in five starts.

LOFTY THE GIFT THAT KEEPS ON GIVING AT WINGATUI

The winning roll of Loftys Gift (NZ) (Ghibellines) continued at Wingatui on Sunday, the consistent mare going four in a row with a hard-fought victory in The Mosgiel Tavern (2200m).

A daughter of Ghibellines, Lofty's Gift won two races in the care of Shaune Ritchie & Colm Murray, and relocated to the Ascot Park stable of Robert Dennis earlier this year.

Since journeying south, the mare had four starts and won the most recent three, and was allocated 54kg in the Rating 87 contest with the luxury of Donovan Cooper's claim bringing that back to just 51kg.

Lofty's Gift was backed into $3.20 favouritism and settled comfortably midfield under Cooper, before being forced three-wide along the back straight with Lovelock (NZ) (Sacred Falls) controlling the pace in front.

The mare claimed the lead at the top of the straight alongside Heidi Hi and Leitrim Lad and was slightly wayward under pressure, but she let down strongly from the 200m and held off the late charge of Proserve (NZ) (Proisir) to score by a long neck.

Dennis was proud of the mare's efforts, particularly after the run in transit she had endured.

"It was a super effort, she was very tough and very brave," he said.

"She did it the hard way caught out wide and was a bit of a sitting duck up the straight, but she was just too good for them again."

Despite raising her career earnings over $125,000 for owners Markwood Lodge and the Knot Enough Syndicate, Dennis explained Lofty's Gift is fairly unassuming despite her talent on the track.

"She's honestly just another horse, doesn't make any waves and she fits in and does her thing," he said.

"But once we take her to the races, she just puts in 100% and wants to win.

"We'll just pick out the next good staying race for her now and probably have a go at that."

The five-year-old was bred by the Anderton's of White Robe Lodge, as the sixth foal out of their Danzighill mare Flyby.

Their resident sire Ghibellines had a highly-successful afternoon at the local meeting, his progeny in Bauble, Anticipate and impressive debut winner Cloche also saluting.

New Zealand Bloodstock representative
Andrew Buick. (supplied)

Andrew Buick hails from a renowned equestrian family, being brother to dual British champion jockey William and De Burgh Equine’s Martin, while their parents are eight-time Scandinavian champion jockey Walter and dressage rider and showjumper Maria. Here, he tells us about his background and role with New Zealand Bloodstock.

It’s fair to say the sport is in your blood...

Horses and racing were a massive part of our upbringing, which I’m sure has helped all of us enormously career-wise. I’m very grateful for everything they taught me, and the knowledge and advice they keep applying.

It’s a great help for me when I’m unsure or have questions about certain things; you can give any of them a ring and the feedback and advice will always be of value. We speak most days and go through the ins and outs of what’s happening.

Did you always feel you’d end up working in the industry or were there other interests you might have pursued?

We were never pushed into any aspect of the industry, but I’m pretty sure it was on the cards quite early on for all of us. I was never tempted to be a jockey and I think mum and dad are quite happy with having only one in the family as it’s a cut-throat sport being a jockey, and certainly comes with its risks.

I probably fancied myself as a footballer at some stage, but quickly found out I was 100 lengths behind the rest, ability-wise.

Talk us through your experiences in racing prior to joining New Zealand Bloodstock...

Although always in touch with horses and being mad keen on racing, the Irish National Stud course really gave me a kick-start and played a key role in the trajectory of my career. The academic aspect of the course is brilliant, but it’s the connections and networking they expose you to that really sets it apart, and it’s a course I would recommend to anyone.

After the course I did a stint with John and Thady Gosden, which was brilliant. It was quite surreal to see the calibre of horses they had at the time, and continue to develop and train season after season.

'THE NZ SUFFIX PUNCHES WELL ABOVE ITS WEIGHT' - NEW ZEALAND BLOODSTOCK'S ANDREW BUICK ON LIFE DOWN UNDER AND HIS FAMOUS FAMILY

I then ventured to Arrowfield Stud in Australia, where I worked through a breeding and sales season. It was a great experience to work for one of Australia's leading stud farms and fascinating to compare the practices employed to those in the northern hemisphere.

My time in Australia provided the perfect platform to my current role at New Zealand Bloodstock as the two nations share common traits among their racing and breeding, and there is a fair degree of crossover.

You've been with NZB since last July – what does your role as bloodstock representative entail?

It's quite a diverse role but the essence of it is to service the needs and expectations of our vendors and buyers alike. The bloodstock team are on the road inspecting horses for all of our sales throughout the year, so inspections take up a chunk of the calendar, but it's something we love doing. The farms in New Zealand are stunning and it's great to see the quality stock coming through.

We also attend a lot of trials and racedays to keep up to date with the stock which is performing on the track. It's a good opportunity to catch up with our clients. We assist them with everything from bloodstock valuations to portfolio management, so we're kept busy throughout the year.

Where are you based, had you been to New Zealand before joining NZB, and how much travelling do you do?

The NZB bloodstock team are all based in the Waikato region, an hour south of Auckland, which is where the bulk of the major farms and training centres are located.

I'd never been to New Zealand before I came in late July last year, so I didn't know entirely what to expect. But I was fortunate to have a good friend in George Chittick, who I met on the Irish National Stud course. The Chittick family owns and operates the famed Waikato Stud, which would be one of the best thoroughbred nurseries in the world. George and I are great mates, and we had a good chat before I took on the role and flew down here. He gave me some good advice about what to expect, and, for me, New Zealand and working for New Zealand Bloodstock has exceeded my expectations and then some.

We do plenty of travelling both within New Zealand and internationally to keep tabs on both our vendors and our buying bench. Australia is our biggest export market along with Asia, so it's pivotal we keep encouraging and scouting for new clients and markets to bring down to Karaka for our sales and make sure they get the true Kiwi experience and world-renowned Karaka hospitality, which is second to none and should be on the bucket list for everyone in our industry.

NZB recently made me their European representative to go along with my bloodstock role here, so I'll be back in the UK in time for Royal Ascot to hopefully bring some new clients down for our sales and also look after our valued recurring purchasers.

'THE NZ SUFFIX PUNCHES WELL ABOVE ITS WEIGHT' - NEW ZEALAND BLOODSTOCK'S ANDREW BUICK ON LIFE DOWN UNDER AND HIS FAMOUS FAMILY

New Zealand racing and bloodstock is possibly – fairly or unfairly – overshadowed by neighbour Australia; what would you advocate as the USPs of the industry in NZ?

Australia has got a thriving racing industry, as we know, and is like a much bigger brother to New Zealand, with a foal crop more than five times the size.

But the unique selling points of New Zealand include the incredible environment in which the stock are raised, expert horsemanship, value for money and, most importantly, racetrack performance. It is also a great place to visit and in the past 12 months the prize-money has risen significantly, so there are a lot of positives.

It's safe to say the NZ suffix punches well above its weight, and New Zealand-bred horses are very hard to beat wherever they go. Over the past five seasons New Zealand-bred horses have won more than 20 per cent of the Group 1 races in Australia, yet account for 7.5 per cent of the horse population, so the statistics are quite compelling.

Horses like So You Think, Little Bridge and Starcraft all carried the NZ suffix to elite success in Europe, while in Hong Kong the two best horses, Golden Sixty and Lucky Sweynesse, were both sold through the NZB Ready to Run Breeze-Up Sale.

I'd say climate is a big factor in the success. The land and scenery here would be quite similar to Ireland, with lush pasture, cold winters and overall perfect conditions to breed tough, sound and quality racehorses.

More generally in terms of the sport in the southern and northern hemispheres, what one thing could each learn from the other and do a bit better?

New Zealand and Australia do a terrific job of promoting syndication as a form of ownership. With more people involved and a broader base to share the experience, it gives the sport more relevance and creates a great shared experience. The feeling in Europe is they keep relying on the same pool of owners, and it looks very hard to be competitive against the big outfits.

One aspect I do miss when attending and watching racing in both New Zealand and Australia are the scenic, testing and undulating tracks. The UK especially is very blessed to have tracks such as Goodwood, Newmarket and Epsom, which are incredible racecourses and test the horses in a unique way.

Whether ridden by your brother William or not, any favourite racehorses down the years?

Will has sat on some superstars over the years but Blue Point gets the tick from me. He never shied away from a battle and I loved watching him clash with Battaash and other world-class sprinters.

His King's Stand-Diamond Jubilee double was breathtaking and to be one of very few horses to do the Tuesday-Saturday double speaks volumes of him as a racehorse. He's had a terrific start to his stud career, which has been great to follow.
